

Cupid's Corner

(Edited by Betty Breen.)

My dear Miss Breen: As you have been helping the other girls who have written to you, would you please give me your advice? Every one seems to think that I am a 'rough-neck' and no one will have anything to do with me. The girls are the ones who do not associate with me. I am going with a tough boy, but I like him better than any I have ever seen. He is the dearest boy, but he is bashful, though, excepting when we are out by ourselves. He wants me to go car riding three times a week, and go to church, about 14 miles from where I live. He doesn't want anyone else along. I like him very much, though. Please give me your advise.—LOUISE.

People form opinion of their neighbors, by their actions. If you have gained the reputation among your friends as being a 'rough-neck,' be very careful where you go and what you do. Don't be boisterous, as you have doubtless been. Take away the cause for these people's opinions, and you will soon gain the reputation of being a modest, sensible girl. I would advise you to stop the relations between you and your boy friend. The fact the he asks you to go to church, and objects to anyone else going with you, justifies the opinion that he is not the most desirable. After all, it is just whim that came yesterday and will go tomorrow, that you like this boy.

Miss Breen desires to give helpful and sane advice to all young people who find their pathway strewn with briars. Readers are invited to write her in care of the Phoenix.

Everyday Etiquette

(Edited by Betty Breen)

Is it proper for a young man, when he meets a girl friend on the street, to stop her and converse with her?

No, if he must talk with her, he should turn and walk with her in the direction she is going.
