Was No Need to Raze the Roof

DETROIT — (AP) — Steve Orloski came home from a hunting trip to find a new roof on his house.

The roofing contractor said that the warehouse had delivered the material to Orloski's house instead of the one across the street, where it was supposed to go.

The roofers came along and put the new roof on the house where they found the material.

No charge, the contractor said.

"This Santa Claus is fine," Orloski said, "but I wish it had been something I needed . . . there was nothing wrong with the roof."
